

Your attendance is requested Homecoming 2018 September 29-30, 2018 inting rage and an overwhelming gloom. With my eyes sections as on the paper. * I had slipped out of the classroom building ous drich gradestavay. WE malished Chat I may be the wastrock to assimps, to be That be when the paper my destroying to say the least this was not be say that he was not the paper my destroyed to grade that fell below my expect taking that was a court of me. I was accustomed to grade that fell below my expect taking the paper had knocked me out my expect, taking the paper had knocked me out my expect, taking the paper had knocked me out my expect, taking the paper had knocked me out my expect, taking the paper had knocked me out my expect, taking the paper had knocked me out my expect. hat bat sat proudly at the entrange to the library I had struggled all year in Metro the stairs. For three days I had not played basketball or seen my girlfriend ap and lose my academic footing. * My basketball shoes felt heavy, filled with However, it did not take much for me to lose my balance, fall into self-doub that booking with uncertainty and fear, but struggling to stand nonetheless, that cook standing on my newly found legs of academic independence. new, it was as fragile as a colt's legs minutes after birth. I was like confidence I had not felt before. Yet, because this confidence was so year of Landmark College behind me, I had obtained a degree of regard to my academic endeavors, but having the success of my first of failure. Being dyslexic, I was accustomed to these feelings in my dorm, my mind was clouded with frustration, fear, and the feeling As I climbed the ninety stairs from the classroom building toward The Ninety Stairs of Self-Discovery

As the first president and early admissions director, Jim and Carolyn Olivier actively worked to launch the College more than 30 years ago.

Please join us at 4 p.m. on Saturday, September 29, for the dedication of the Jim & Carolyn Olivier Admissions Building in honor of their enduring legacy. You are cordially invited to attend

Homecoming 2018

A "Pioneers" Celebration
and
Jim & Carolyn Olivier
Admissions Building Dedication

Saturday & Sunday September 29 - 30, 2018

RSVP by September 14, 2018

View the full homecoming schedule and RSVP at www.landmark.edu/homecoming2018 alumni@landmark.edu